

STAT 641

Homework 1

Keegan Smith

June 2, 2025

Problem 1

1. An observational study only collects information about subjects without giving treatments while an experimental study collects information about individuals who are given a treatment (and who are not given a treatment usually).

An example of an observational study is an election poll.

An example of an experimental study is a clinical trial.